Close of German Gambling Houses.
[Baden-Baden (November 3) Correspondence of the London Times.]

The 31st of October is here, the close of the season proper, which this year is remarkable for being also the end of the public tables for the games of Trente et Quatre and Roulette. This is the first place in Germany, under the operation of the law, that is now definitely closed. The other two great establishments, Wiesbaden and Homburg, remain open until the last day of the year, and the smaller one at Naumheim until the end of November. A variety of absurd canards were rife some days previously, one of which will surprise no one more, perhaps, than the members of the club who were said to be coming to play here the last two days. This was the English Jockey Club, and this canard had an additional pair of wings given it by the alleged receipt of a telegram at the Hotel de Hollande to engage two hundred beds for the members—not an easy task, as the hotel has but one hundred and fifty rooms. The general expectation was that immense crowds would come to see the last of the public play. In the afternoon, about three o'clock, there seemed to be no probability of such being the case. I walked through the three rooms that now remained open, with two Roulette tables and one Trente et Quatre, and there seemed to be hardly the accustomed number of punters; possibly, in all, less than a couple of hundred persons in all the salons. There was no evidence of anything unusual. People lost their rouleaux of gold and thousand francs bank notes with the accustomed apparent indifference. But for the last two or three weeks there has been much less than the former high play, and the number of aristocratic and wealthy visitors has very sensibly diminished, though many were resolved to stay and be in at the death.

A modest Manchester man by information, that he was in good company, as, in point of fact, both his immediate neighbors were Princes, one a well known Russian, and the other formerly a sovereign German potentate. At eight o'clock, when the usual concert, of more than average excellence, by the admirable orchestra under the direction of the able director, Herr Koenemann, was given in the great room adjoining the play rooms, the audience was very large. In the play rooms another phase of things was seen. A lady, who amuses herself every evening in playing one louis on the twelve numbers in which falls the number she receives in a check card for her mantle and belongings, and who, by a caprice of fortune, has, with one day's exception, won regularly for three weeks, told me in despair that there was not the slightest human probability of getting under enough to place her stake, and watch it and see that it was not appropriated unfairly, for these little mistakes have been vastly more frequent than usual in these latter days. This was the most provoking of the actual number she had—23—came up during her efforts to arrive. Each coming train brought a large quota of visitors. From Frankfurt-on-the-Main, from Mannheim, Carlsruhe, Strasburg, Bielefeld, and Mulhouse on the other, large streams of visitors came pouring in. Heidelberg furnished a contingent of students, and Rastadt of officers—in civil costume mostly, as in uniform it is improper to play. In civil costume some license is taken. However, the greater part were destined neither to win nor to lose, as by ten o'clock there was a regular jam, and approach to the tables was only obtained by a very patient few. Extraordinary precautions had been taken by the officials in case of any disorder. I heard several expressions of hope that there would be a row or a fight, which unnamable desires seemed destined to end in utter disappointment. The crowd was decidedly a very mixed one; there were butchers, bakers, grocers, peasants (male and female), and evidently some cooks.

The grooms of the chambers were as usual in attendance in full evening costume. They seemed struck with horror at the unwelcome vulgar smoke and if I am not mistaken I saw something like a tear stand in the eye of one as he remarked it was melancholy to see such people in the Baden saloons, where the aristocracy were formerly saloons. Nevertheless, the crowd was, if not very quiet, well behaved, and the expectations of those who looked for any disturbance appeared likely to be doomed to disappointment, when just at fifteen minutes to twelve—midnight was the hour when the possession of the establishment passed from the family of Benatz and Dupressor—like the inevitable cur at the Derby, a vulgar, dirty little fellow, who had been drinking too freely, having lost a stake of fifty florins on red, seized his stake again, refused to give it up, and showed fight. The greatest confusion ensued in the Trente et Quatre room where it occurred, and it was not without some trouble he was marched off by the police. The rooms were immediately closed as the clock struck twelve, and public play came to an end in Baden Baden forever.

What the effect may be upon the fortunes of Baden-Baden time will show. On one hand it is maintained that Baden's prosperity, so far from being diminished, will increase, and the character of the place become much more aristocratic and infinitely more select. But, as to the other side, it is said that the great stream of visitors will enormously diminish, and, necessarily, the large sums of money expended by them will fall off. The direct result paid for the privilege has been for the last two years 600,000 florins annually (about $50,000). This is insignificant in comparison with the money that was indirectly brought to Baden and expended. The list of visitors up to the end of October, is between $8,000 and $9,000. This includes only those who spent at least one night in the town, and takes no account of the vast numbers who come for the day, as many do regularly in neighboring places, or having residences. I am given to understand that the profit of the tables this year somewhat exceeds 2,500,000 florins, about $100,000. The beauty of the situation of Baden has often been widely known, but its best friends extolled, and it is not without some trouble he was marched off by the police. The rooms were immediately closed as the clock struck twelve, and public play came to an end in Baden Baden forever.

FALL TRADE, 1872.
E. J. MILLER,
Importer of and Wholesale Dealer in China, Glass and Queensware,
Is now receiving his stock of the above goods,
to which he invites the attention of country merchants and dealers generally. Having the benefit of fifty years' experience in this business and unusual facilities for purchasing, he is able to offer his goods at as low prices as any house in the country, and all he asks is an examination of his goods and prices. Country merchants, calling on the trains of the O. & A. M. R., and the W. & O. R. R. can look through his stock and leave their orders at night, as his house is kept open for that purpose.
Besides a regular stock of CHINA, GLASS and QUEENSWARE, a number of other goods suitable for country stores, will be found such as BRITANNIA and SILVER-PLATED CASTORS, SPOONS, FORKS, &c., &c., Window Glass and Putty, Stoneware, Fine Tin
and Brass Ware, and a variety of Fancy Goods—all at lowest prices for cash.
THOS. B. HUDSON is still with the above house, and will be glad to have a call from his old friends. sep 18-3m
